Marvic Leonen: The negotiator who listens

By Nikko Dizon

MARVIC Leonen listens.

More than any other quality, it is this ability to listen intently to anyone explaining their convictions to him that helped the government's chief peace negotiator forge the beginnings of a peace pact with the separatist Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF), according to two of Leonen's closest friends and colleagues.

Palace to roll out red carpet for MILF

By Nikko Dizon and TJ Burgonio

WEARING pink hijabs, young Muslim women will join hundreds of Muslim professionals, soldiers and other Christians in a run today on Manila's belt highway Epifanio de los Santos Avenue (Edsa) to promote religious understanding among Filipinos.

Tomorrow the Muslim community in Manila will hold a peace rally to show support for a framework agreement between the government and the Moro Islamic Liberation Front (MILF) to end the decades-long Moro insurgency in Mindanao.

The agreement will be signed in Malacañang tomorrow afternoon in a ceremony that will be attended by foreign dignitaries, including Ekmeleddin Ihsanoglu, secretary general of the Organization of Islamic Cooperation (OIC), whose presence will signify the Islamic world's recognition of the legitimacy of the accord.

Malacañang is rolling out the red carpet for 200 MILF rebels who are coming to the Palace to witness the signing of the agreement.

But ahead of their first visit to the Palace, MILF leaders are extending an olive branch to disgruntled Moro leader Nur Misuari, who has been railing against the accord that will supersede the peace agreement signed in 1996 between the government and his faction of the Moro National Liberation Front (MNLF).

In a statement issued on Oct. 8, MILF chair Murad Ebrahim said the

EVEN at a young age, Ahod (aka Murad) Ebrahim, who was born on May 2, 1948, showed the resolute and single-minded qualities of the born fighter.

Orphaned at 10 when his father and mother died within a year of each other, Ebrahim persisted in the study of the Koran at the family-operated madrasah (Muslim school) in Barangay Kalalinan between the towns of Libungan and Sultan Kudarat in the old province of Cotabato.

While pursuing his Koranic studies at the madrasah, he went to a regular high school with the help of some well-to-do relatives, the prominent Pendatun clan among them.

Not just any tree, got to be native for Odette

By DJ Yap

HER FIERY spirit continues to stoke the passions of her fellow earth defenders. And so it is that three years after her death, Odette Alcantara is still called upon to be the champion of the trees.

For trees, as Rabindranath Tagore once put it, "are the earth's endless effort to speak to the listening heaven."

Alcantara is the face and inspiration behind a new campaign launched on Thursday to save the Philippines' native trees.

Spearheaded by Earth Day Network Philippines Inc. (EDNPI), a group founded by Alcantara and like-minded individuals, the "Odette Alcantara Legacy Trees Project" seeks to conserve and preserve the country's indigenous and endemic tree species.

"This is the fulfillment of a long discussion we had on how do we extend the legacy of Odette Alcantara," EDNPI president Roberto Guevarra said during the project launch at Miriam College in Quezon City.

"When it came to Tita Odette, we remember her passion for trees," he said. In an audiovisual presentation hon-

Second chances under the pines

By Karla P. Delgado

THE PINES of Baguio are like family. They have been steady through the seasons and through the ups and downs of life.

I planted my first tree with my mother Mercedes in the garden of our home at 40 Kisad Road. It was one-foot tall, with a burst of bright green pine needles at the top. It was in this garden that I spent many mornings with my grandmother Amorin, tending to her roses in shades of maroon and magenta. Ah, the smell of pine and roses will forever be entwined for me!

My first kiss was a stolen one from a Baguio boy. I was 14. I found him terribly handsome, though I never admitted it. And

MARTIN Ignacio Paez Lorenzo

By Theresa S. Samaniego

MARTIN Ignacio Paez Lorenzo is no celebrated personality, yet his success in the Philippine food and restaurant business could easily peg him off as one.

The chair and president of Pancake House Inc. candidly says that it was his love for food that allowed him to conquer the odds and become one of the country's most admired and respected restaurateurs. It helped as well, of course, that Lorenzo had the "discipline to run the business" which allowed him to successfully manage several brands over the years.

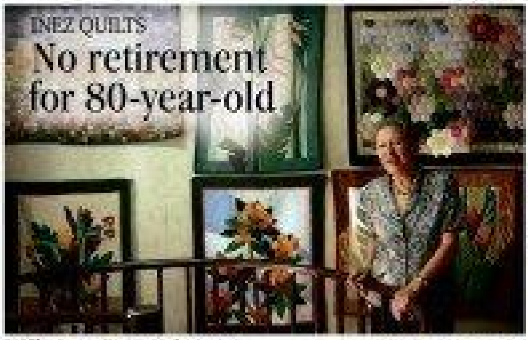

"I always enjoy eating and I enjoyed eating at Pancake House ever since I was a kid. We used to live near Rizal Theater where the first Pancake House was located that was around 1974, 1975. So when the opportunity to acquire Pancake House in year 2000 came, I said to myself I might as well give it a try since I wanted to get into food retail as well," Lorenzo tells Sunday Biz.

Lorenzo, being a BS management engineering graduate at the Ateneo de Manila University and an MBA graduate at the Wharton Graduate School in the US, admits that he was no chef but did he have

SHARING THE VOICE OF AGE AND WISDOM

These are a few of my favorite things–by Julie Andrews at 70

For the other 70-year-olds and above

Julie Andrews

TO CELEBRATE her 70th birthday, Julie Andrews ("Sound of Music," "Mary Poppins") had a special performance at Manhattan's Radio City Music Hall for the benefit of the American Association for Retired Persons.

One of the numbers she sang was "My Favorite Things" from the "Sound of Music."

Her lyrics have been a hit in the Internet, and forwarded in e-mail:

Maalox and nose drops and needles for knitting,
Walkers and handrails and new dental fittings,
Bundles of magazines tied up in string,
These are a few of my favorite things.

Cadillacs and cataracts, hearing aids and glasses,
Polident and Fixodent and false teeth in glasses,
Pacemakers, golf carts and porches with swings,
These are a few of my favorite things.

When the pipes leak, When the bones creak,
When the knees go bad,
I simply remember my favorite things,
And then I don't feel so bad.

Hot tea and crumpets and corn pads for bunions,
No spicy hot food or food cooked with onions,
Bathrobes and heating pads and hot meals they bring,
These are a few of my favorite things.

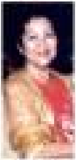

Back pain, confused brains and no need for sinnin',
Thin bones and fractures and hair that is thinnin',
And we won't mention our short shrunken frames,
When we remember our favorite things.

When the joints ache, When the hips break,
When the eyes grow dim,
Then I remember the great life I've had,
And then I don't feel so bad.

It is written that she got a standing ovation that lasted over four minutes and repeated encores.

THERE ARE too many stories to ignore, with some reaching urban legend status. There's the blogger who supposedly slapped a PR person at a beauty event, the blogger who shoplifted at a store opening and the blogger who has been hawking her product samples on a popular Internet forum.

Different publicists and brands have different horror stories to tell about bloggers who demand to be invited to events, bloggers who gatecrash, bloggers who ask for loot bags and then complain about the contents, bloggers who ask for product samples and then sell them instead of writing about them.

The journey now starts with Cebu Pacific and Visa.

"Whether consumers choose to pay with their Visa credit, debit or prepaid card for their flights and holidays, we will offer cardholders exclusive promotions, discounts and privileges. They will benefit from the convenience and security that comes from paying with Visa. Ultimately, we hope to help Filipinos see more of the world with Cebu Pacific, for a lifetime of memories," added Jamieson.

Top school principals get their due

Long-time school heads are recognized by HSBC for implementing change

By Irene C. Perez

[illegible] Elementary School principal Marciana de Guzman and HSBC president and CEO Tony Cripps

[illegible] Elementary School principal Ellis Lopez receives a plaque from Cripps.

HSBC awards outstanding principals Aurora Marcelino, Marciana de Guzman, Zenaida E. Pekaharon, Marilyn Macalino and Ellis Lopez.

"EDUCATION is a business of change."

That's the reminder of Zenaida E. Pekaharon, principal of [illegible] Elementary School. Pekaharon has been a principal for 25 years, and one would think she knows everything there is to know in running a school. She said experience is key but one should always be open to change.

Pekaharon is one of the top "graduates" of the HSBC Principals Leadership Enhancement and Development Program (PLP). The recognition was given to five principals who have implemented changes in their elementary schools through the program. The awarding was recently held in Makati Shangri-La.

HSBC tied up with Sa Aklat Sisikat Foundation in 2009 to come up with PLP. It aims to promote public school principals as community leaders, and teach them a progressive approach in training new teachers. Over 200 principals have benefited from the program; all were given the Principal's Handbook which was developed by the foundation.

MARGARITA Delgado and Lizzie Zobel of Sa Aklat Sisikat Foundation

JOHANNA Garcia, HSBC SVP for communications

CRIPPS and HSBC corporate sustainability officer [illegible]

The other awardees are Marilyn C. Macalino of [illegible] Elementary School; Ellis T. Lopez of [illegible] Elementary School; Marciana de Guzman of [illegible] Elementary School; and Aurora Marcelino of [illegible] Elementary School.

HSBC president and CEO Tony Cripps handed the awards and tokens, together with Sa Aklat Sisikat Foundation founders Margarita Delgado and Lizzie Zobel.

Welcome surprise

These principals knew that the Sa Aklat Sisikat team would check on their school every now and then for monitoring, but they did not know an awarding was planned.

"It was a surprise for us," Macalino said. "They would visit us to see if we improved, but we did not know there was a contest."

Most of the awardees are long-time principals: Pekaharon for 25 years; Lopez, 22; and Macalino, 30. They are not new to handling school issues, but going through PLP enhanced their management skills.

It was as simple as writing a proper business letter.

"The main problem of public schools is lack of funds for books, classrooms, educational materials. PLP taught us how to write business letters to possible sponsors, and that 'broadened our vision,'" Lopez said.

"We also learned to be more approachable in training young teachers," added Macalino.

The principals were unanimous in saying that most kids now read less, and most are preoccupied with such things—computer games, social media sites, Internet—and while these are not necessarily bad, they are distracting. Kids now learn to read at age 7-8, when it used to be from 4-5.

This is Sa Aklat Sisikat's advocacy to achieve "functional literacy."

"Kids may know to read, but a lot do not understand what they are reading," explained Zobel. "We want them to be able to comprehend, to be interested and continue reading and learning."

According to Delgado, it is through education that poor kids could make their lives better, and Sa Aklat Sisikat Foundation supports education in helping these kids out.

The foundation and HSBC are coming up with another campaign—the Teach for the Philippines (TFP) program, which aims to recruit top students from universities and train them as public school teachers.

It goes with the premise: Best students would make best teachers.

"If we could encourage the brightest students to become teachers, they would be able to pass their skills on to their would-be students," said Cripps. "Imagine the kind of students we'll have in the future."
